IN STYLE

Given the straight-out-of-a-storybook setting, it is hardly surprising that The Lodge on Loch Goil has clinched 'Most Stylish Hotel' in Scotland at the recent Scottish Style Awards. The venue boasts an 1864 private Victorian country house, a new restaurant, Leiper at The Lodge, a treehouse tucked away at the end of the lawn (big kids, we feel your excitement) and the Victorian Summerhouse, which houses a wood burning stove and a balcony, overlooking the sea loch. Magical.

All change

The Loch Lomond Arms Hotel is hitting refresh on its accommodation and events space, with a period of refurbishment well under way. For couples, the Riversedge cottage is up for a revamp, and will soon serve as a secluded retreat on the banks of Luss Water. Back at the ranch, the events area is being renovated to include a log fireplace (like the cosy number opposite) and floor to ceiling windows.

WIN-WIN

Congratulations are in order for Cameron House, whose Carrick Spa has been crowned Spa of the Year at 2015's Scottish Hair & Beauty Awards, although the beauty haven is no stranger to success: this is the spa's sixth award in the last year, following accolades from The Spa Traveller, the World Luxury Spa Awards and the Luxury Travel Guide Global Awards. Book yourself in for a session in the rooftop infinity pool (above). www.qhotels.co.uk

MAKE ROOM

As part of a £10m development, Portavadie on Loch Fyne has invested in two new function rooms. The Barclay and Bulloch suites can cater for 30 to 60 guests and are designed to make the most of their west coast and marina views, with enormous corner windows. Look into the Barclay package, which includes exclusive use of the Bulloch suite for ceremonies and the Barclay suite for the wedding breakfast. www.portavadie.com
